History [ edit ]
Brazil had a tournament called Ta&a Brasil de Futebol Feminino (Wom) Tj T* E

Nacional (1990 and 1991) and Ta&a Brasil de Clubes (1993). A competition also named Campeo nato Brasileiro de Futebol Feminino which &#128200; was a forerunner of the current tour nament, was founded in 1994, ran that season, was cancelled in 1995 and re-instated &#128200; in 1 996 being played until 2001.
When it folded, the country was left with only state football leagues for women &#128200; available in few states and no national tournament.

t;
In 2006, another national tournament attempt was made, organized by the Amateur Paulista &#12820 Football Federation
(Federa&o Paulista de Futebol Amador, FPPA) and the Nationa l Football League (Liga

Nacional de Futebol Feminino. The tournament was contested in Jaguari&na, S&o Paulo state on i ts first year (2006) &#128200; and in multiple towns of Rio de Janeiro state on its second year (2007).[1]&

t;
In 2007, CBF created the Copa do &#128200; Brasil de Futebol Feminino, a national cup tournament, and in 2013, a national league competition was founded, the Campeonato Brasileiro & de Futebol Feminino, with a short three-month season initially.[2][3] In 2024, te ams that reached the knock-out stage got a financial &#128200; support of about USD 3,
